The Republic of Kosova, formerly an autonomous province of Yugoslavia now brutally repressed by the communist regime in Serbia, recognizes the need to fully communicate its positions in the United States on issues relative to the current crisis perpetuated by the government of Serbia.

Due to "ethnic cleansing" and other acts limiting the human rights of non-Serbs in Kosova, the Republic of Kosova feels compelled to relay its position to the legislative and executive branches of the U.S. government.

Means to be used include printed communiques, individual meetings and briefing by official representatives of the Republic of Kosova.
